Printing of every description neatly executed: such as Books, Pamphlets, Circulars, Cards, Handbills, etc., on as good terms as at any other office.

To the friends of Temperance and the public generally we now make our appeal in behalf of this paper. The publisher feeling it a matter of importance to the interest of the Temperance cause in the District, as well as the general interest of the cause, and having been, as he conceives, Providentially placed in a situation at this time when he can mingle this interest with that of the business men, and thereby render a double service to the community, and still further open a medium of communication by which our principles may be extended far and wide, at a cheap rate, he has purchased a printing establishment, so as not only to be able to put a daily paper regularly to press, but also a weekly; and still further, be able to do any other printing the public may be pleased to have done; and he assures them that they shall have no cause of complaint. He has made arrangements by which he can devote his time to the interest of the office and the paper; and, having employed Mr. Charles W. Fenton, who will be always on the spot, to conduct the printing, he has no doubt but that general satisfaction will be given. We shall make arrangements to have the earliest news; also the proceedings of Congress.

We wish all who are indebted for the paper up to this time to pay up, as the affairs of the tri-weekly must be closed. They will perceive that we are about to give them a better paper, double the number, at the same price.

While the "COLUMBIAN FOUNTAIN" will be devoted to the cause of Temperance, its columns will be enriched by original articles on subjects calculated to interest, instruct, and benefit its readers. It is intended so to blend variety, amusement, and instruction, as that the various tastes of its patrons may be (as far as it is practicable) gratified. Commerce, Literature, and Science, and every other subject of interest, not inconsistent with Temperance and morality, will receive the earnest attention of the publisher. Nothing of a sectarian, political, or personal character will be admitted.

THE YOUNG MAN'S WAY

TO INTELLIGENCE, RESPECTABILITY, HONOR AND USEFULNESS.

The idle man at any age was never happy. It is contrary to a law of his creator that he should be. Many hope for wealth and the means to support them in inactivity. This is all wrong. Why not hope and toil for means of usefulness. The reason why so many aged persons lose their faculties so soon, is because they are not kept in exercise. They rust for want of employment. The most miserable are those who have nothing to do. The mind and body both should be employed to the last, if we wish to keep them vigorous. Man can be trained and accustomed to almost any thing. Bonaparte was born and trained in the heat of revolution and war. A military life was then and there almost the only road to distinction. He caught the inspiration of the times, and by dint of firmness and perseverance became eminent. It may, or may not have been natural to him. Had he been the son of a farmer, and spent his youth in performing the duties of retired life, perhaps he would not have been such a prodigy of decision and firmness. What the world in this case has, therefore, called a natural endowment, may have been the result of circumstances only. Many a man has laid the flattering unction to his soul, that he possessed certain talents, friends have flattered into a belief that these must create for him certain distinction in a future day; but alas, for lack of diligence in their development, all has ended in disappointment. In cases where nature has seemed most parsimonious, industry and application has created distinction. Most men rise because they will rise—labor is every thing to the young, and fortune is generally an idle word much in use, but seldom understood.

Honesty and unyielding integrity in all transactions—be they large and therefore publicly known—or so small as never to come to the light of public observation, is one of the most important attributes of character, and never dispensed with without manifest loss. No reproach so effectually and completely blasts and ruins a man's reputation as being called a rogue and cheat. Better be poor all the days of your life, with the consciousness of stern rectitude in principle and practice, than rich as Croesus—with the guilty reflection that wealth was improperly accumulated. It is bad enough to be called a rogue, and forever branded in society as a dishonest man, but it is infinitely worse to feel the continual upbraidings of an inward guiltiness which allows the spirit no repose either by night or day. A man may flee from the well aimed shafts of others—and in his moments of domestic retirement amidst his family and friends find comfort provided he be innocent, but if guilty, in vain may he attempt to escape from the reproving of his own conscience. Matters may also be so managed, that others may not be able to detect a dereliction from a course of integrity, and we may retire with some honor from the place of trade; but there is no comfort—except to the innocent; God and our own souls know if others do not, and this is sufficient to bar from all enjoyment. The open countenance, and manly bearing—results of innocence—are gone. The money taken from an employer's desk may never be missed, but the fear that it will—the dread of detection, will create a burning sensation—quenching forever the flame of joy which was wont to light up the countenance, and fill with continual trepidation, utterly incompatible with peace of mind. Other men may never know the depth of moral turpitude into which such a one has fallen, but it is enough that he knows it himself, and dreads its fearful consequences.

Self-respect is a wall of protection to innocence. But one dishonest act, however trifling, weakens, and two or three destroys it for ever. It matters but little where the opinions of society place a man, if he knows himself to be numbered with the dishonest and vulgar. The way is prepared to every species of crime, no matter how degrading. No man can be a gentleman after having lost self-respect. Thousands are annually ruined by not heeding the first step in a downward passage. The first guilty act relaxes the stern principle of integrity, disorders the whole moral machinery, and the man is in ruins without being aware of his condition. He is then left a prey to the fierce anarchy of every unruly passion—and the wild control of all those depravities which agitate and deform poor human nature.

It is my object to impress upon your minds in the outset of your career that the sin of dishonesty is not to be measured by the magnitude of its gains; this principle of judgment has obtained far too extensively among men, and has doubtless misled many. "He that offendeth in one point is guilty of all," is the Scriptural, and only true rule in the case; the act of crossing the line marking the difference between honesty and dishonesty—not the distance traveled afterwards—is what constitutes the chief criminality. The point of time in which principle yielded to temptation was the most important one, because the work of degradation and ruin then commenced; the moral principles then gave way—whether the resulting gain was a penny or a thousand pounds. And if the circumstances come to the light of public notoriety, community will award the heaviest condemnation to the seemingly smaller offence, because the temptation was less. In this they are right, as the moral depravity is certainly the most apparent.

We always despise the highwayman, but are ever wont to deem him the worst who commits murder under any circumstances affording the least prospect of gain, rightly judging that there depravity has done its most perfect work. On the same principle he who cheats another out of a small sum, is supposed to possess a meaner soul than the one who plays the rogue for a higher prize. In both cases, however, villainess will be their ruin, "and their sins will find them out."

Whether it be right or wrong it cannot be disputed that community will retain the remembrance of one mean or wicked act, while scores of virtuous and praiseworthy deeds are forgotten altogether; it is so in savage and civilized. "He once told a lie," is with an Indian a sufficient reason for refusing to credit him forever after. We are much more apt to remember the stormy than the clear day—the ugly than the beautiful face. Perhaps the reason is, because they are unnatural or unexpected, and therefore leave the deeper impression.—Every man's honor should be stainless and without suspicion; one blot upon reputation, like a scar in the flesh, will be carried with you to the grave.

COAL! COAL!!

NOW is the time! Just arrived and now landing a small vessel load (90 tons) of Coal, (Anthracite) from Philadelphia. FACULTY AND INSTRUCTORS.

Rev. C. P. KRAUTH, D. D., President and Professor of Moral Science.

Rev. H. S. BAUGHMAN, A. M., Professor of Greek and Rhetoric.

Rev. M. JACOBS, A. M., Professor of Natural Philosophy, Chemistry, &c.

Rev. W. M. REYNOLDS, A. M., Professor of Latin, Mental Philosophy, &c.

M. L. STOEYER, A. M., Professor of History and Principal of Preparatory Department.

Rev. C. A. HAY, A. M., Professor of German Language and Literature.

HERMAN HAUPT, A. M., Professor of Mathematics.

WM. HENRY HARRISON, A. B., Assistant Professor of Languages.

DAVID GILBERT, M. D., Lecturer on Anatomy and Physiology.

Rev. J. G. MORRIS, D. D., Lecturer on Zoology.

WM. ALBAUGH, A. M., Tutor and Teacher in Preparatory Department.

H. R. GEIGER, Teacher of Writing.

The course of studies in Pennsylvania College is as extensive and substantial as that of any institution in the country. The Preparatory Department provides for instruction in all the branches of a thorough English business education, in addition to the Elements of the Mathematics and Classical Literature. The College course is arranged in the four classes usual in the institutions of this country.

The government of the students is as energetic as their circumstances seem to require. They attend at least two recitations a day, and the Faculty contemplate increasing them to three, Church and Bible Class on the Sabbath, and are visited in their rooms so frequently as to preclude the danger of any great irregularities. It is believed no institution in the United States has more exemplary young men in connexion with it. They are all required to lodge in the College edifice, special cases excepted.

The annual expenses are—for board, tuition and room rent, during the winter session $61 87 1-2; for the summer session, $41 87 1-2; washing, $10; wood, $3 00. Total expense, $116 75. Boarding can be had in town at $1 25 per week.

There are two vacations in the year, commencing on the third Thursdays of April and September; each of five weeks continuance.

The summer session will commence on Thursday, the 22d of May. The annual commencement takes place on the third Thursday in September.

The Trustees have recently made various arrangements which will increase the efficiency of the Institution. They have increased the number of Professors and provided for the most ample instruction of the students.

Professor Baughman and Haupt are prepared to board boys and to exercise a special supervision over their studies and deportment, and Parents who may prefer placing their sons under their care, will be secure in regard to their proper management, under arrangements such as pertain to the family circle.

PROTECTION INSURANCE COMPANY.

S. HYATT, Agent for the Protection Insurance Company of Hartford, Connecticut, offers to insure houses, mills, factories, barns, and their contents, and all other descriptions of insurable property, against loss or damage by fire. The rates of premium offered are as low as those of any other similar institution, and every man has now an opportunity, for a trifling sum, to protect himself against the ravages of this destructive element, which often in a single hour sweeps away the earnings of many years.

The course the office pursues in transacting their business, and in the adjustment and paying of losses, is prompt and liberal.

For terms of insurance, application may be made to the above named agent, at his office, opposite Brown's Hotel, in the city of Washington, who is authorized to issue policies to applicants without delay.
